Mr. CHEUNG Wing-ho, Chairman of The Federation of Hong Kong Electrical & Mechanical Industry Trades Unions said, “In response to novel coronavirus, the construction industry unites and be strong, launching the Construction Industry Caring Campaign – Fight against Novel Coronavirus, and one of the tasks is to provide allowance to workers who placed in compulsory quarantine. Electrical and Mechanical Services industry is one of the branches in the construction industry and a trade at an advanced stage in construction projects, some of the workers from property maintenance and repair are not necessarily required to work at construction sites, therefore they may not apply for workers registration card. I am glad to hear that the Campaign extends its beneficiary coverage to seven trades with registered licenses recognised by governmental departments and public bodies. It is a recognition and it shows supports to them. I hope all construction workers perform their duties diligently and fight the virus. Together we can win.”

In addition, the Campaign also provides caring support to successful applicants and their immediate families, including (a) to make caring calls; (b) to purchase and deliver basic necessities; (c) to coordinate industry care resources; (d) to send “Caring Pack”; and (e) referral to social groups and professional services. Applications and relevant documents could be submitted to 9764 1945 through WhatsApp and WeChat.
